MR. DULLES:

a. Referred to the President's forthcoming trip and upon being advised that the advance party is scheduled to receive a briefing by CIA this afternoon, stated he felt it most important that [redacted] participate in view of the Middle Eastern situation. The Director made it clear that CIA Station Chiefs would be available to the members of the advance party and the Presidential party to assist in any way possible. The Director also commented he believed it would be helpful if a representative from the Agency accompanied the two parties in order to facilitate liaison with CIA representatives in places visited.

b. Referred to a Department of the Army cable and commented in a great many instances he found it most difficult to read and understand Defense messages without spending a great deal of time. Mr. Kirkpatrick pointed out that in his opinion the reports system is being overburdened in that voluminous reports are being received containing extraneous items of information. It was also pointed out that because of the great volume of information now being received, it is fast becoming impossible to digest, correlate, and disseminate it and still expect the consumer to find time for reading. Mr. Bissell suggested that insofar as CIA is concerned, he had been considering reducing reports at the point of origin since there would be little or no saving of time and money if reports continue to come to Headquarters which thus necessitates, in a good many instances, the use of cables and the time of the analyst here in Washington. Mr. Kirkpatrick suggested that before such action is taken, we wait until after the first of the year when the new 24-hour watch procedures go into effect and at that time give further consideration to the ways and means to reduce the volume of non-essential reporting.

MR. SHELDON:

MR. LLOYD:

Noted that our over-all budget discussion with Mr. Stans would be held sometime during the week of 23 December.
